Colored Rope.

Every rope used in the British naval service, from heaving line to hawser, wherever used on board ship or in dockyard, has woven into one of its strands, for purposes of identification, a colored thread. A different color is used according to the port of manufacture; red, blue, green and yellow being adopted for different ports.

The presumption is that any rope with the colored thread found outside of such uses is in improper hands. This custom has prevailed in the British navy since long before the days of Nelson. A similar method of identification is employed to some extent commercially. Some railways mark their rope in this way, and it is sometimes employed in identifying ropes which, used for the transmission of power in operating machinery and in lighters, would be liable to be stolen.

Tongues That Kill.

The tongues of some animals are very dangerous weapons. A lion could speedily kill a man by merely licking him with his tongue. The tongues of all the members of the cat family are covered with curious recurving spines, formed of tough cartilage. In the common domestic cat these spines are very small, but are sufficiently well developed to give the tongue a feeling of roughness. In the fiercest animals, such as the lion or tiger, these spines are frequently found projecting up for an eighth of an inch or more, with very sharp points or edges. While the mouth is relaxed the tongue is soft and smooth, but when the animal is excited the spines become rigid.

One Way.

At a certain Welsh railway station which rejoices in the name of "Llanfairpwllgwyngyll"—and about two yards more of it—a new porter was engaged.

He was only an Englishman, but meant to do his duty.

The first train came in. He tackled the name of the station, but failed miserably to pronounce more than about the first inch.

But he was a man of brains. Running along the platform, he pointed to the board which bore the lengthy name and yelled out:

"If there's anybody there for here, this is it!"

Hard on the Wrist Watch.

"It is a fact," declared a jeweler, "that the average watch carried by a woman never keeps accurate time." The reason for his remark was that a dark-eyed young woman had just passed out of the store after having had her new wrist watch regulated. The young lady couldn't understand why a brand-new timepiece should get out of order so quickly, but the jeweler explained it all. "Now that girl is a very popular young lady," he said. "A lot of the young men of Fitchburg call on her. She also has scores of friends among the young women. She goes about the city quite a good deal and is constantly meeting her friends. Probably she meets 25 persons a day or more. If she doesn't stop to speak to all of them, she at least waves her hand. The wrist on that dainty hand carries the watch. The works are inside of the watch. Naturally they get shaken up pretty lively every day. Now a watch to keep correct time ought to remain fairly quiet. That's the whole story about this young woman's wrist watch. She will probably blame the fault upon the jeweler when, as a matter of fact, it is all due to her popularity."—Fitchburg News.

Combinations in Furniture.

Furniture may be purchased for ornament or comfort. Where comfort is combined with the ornamental, the ideal condition prevails. But there are so many people whose ideas of ornamental do not conform with comfort that the furniture makers do not always try to combine comfort and ornament in the making of their product. In half of the homes—at least in a great many of them—the furniture is purchased for ornament, a writer in the Dayton News says. These little gilded chairs for instance, stiff and disagreeable and uncomfortable, they are believed by many, evidently to be ornamental but certainly nobody ever considered them comfortable. They are built with never an idea of the human form. They are equalled in uselessness only by the old-fashioned horsehair sofas that were to be found in the cold, dark parlors of other days—days when the parlor was as uncheerful as a sepulcher, and used only in the event of a wedding or a funeral. Old William Morris had an idea of the beautiful and invented the Morris chair for comfort, achieving the beautiful along with the comfort. And the same with Chippendale—and there is to this day no more comfortable chair than the Chippendale, albeit some folks do not see the beauty of it.

Cause for Excitement.

Mose Johnson, colored, handy man around the factory, came in late one morning, appearing to labor under considerable excitement. "What's the matter, Mose?" asked the foreman. "Sick, huh?" "That's too bad." "Dat ain't de wust ob it. I've got to have operation p'fomed." "What kind?" the foreman queried. "Well, huh, de doctor says I've gotta hab mah asteroids taken out."
